[4] If, like space, time is infinite, the possibility of eternity is again provocative, atropine, and we begin to cling to the new notions of eternal life in Samsara. The new theories are presenting notions of countless eons of time: a phrase you often hear in Mahayana Sutras, curiously. They lead to disenchantment, disappearance, cessation, calming, direct knowledge, self-awakening, unbinding. Why did he refuse to affirm a single word, not even a a "?"Yes". A probable reason often cited as to why the Buddha would not respond is that any answer, regardless of what those answers were, would reinforce the dualism: I, the space-time, the object. and the guy. And finding a copy of yourself is just the beginning of the banana craziness you can do in an infinite universe. [3] Oxford mathematician Marcus du Saustoy, echoing the "Rummes in the cosmological clock. Malunkyaputta was alone in isolation, this train of thought arose in his consciousness: "These positions that are not declared, reserved, discarded by the blessed "... The cosmos is eternal, "" The cosmos is finite "", the soul and the are the same "," the soul and the are the same "," the soul and the are the same "," the cosmos is eternal, "" Af ¢ â, ¬ ", for death that there is a tathagata and does not exist, " a fee death, there is a tathagata does not exist infinite. Buddha refused to answer these provocative questions, considering them not useful for the vay. Or" maybe not. And, if that is the case, then the concern of attachment is very real. And what do not they earn for me? That is why they are not declared by me. Notes: [1]  $\hat{A} \notin \hat{A}$ ,  $\hat{A}$  (CULA-MALUNKYOVADA SUTTA: The shortest instructions for Malunkya $\hat{A} \notin \hat{A}$ ,  $\neg$  (MN 63), translated from the Pali by Thanissaro Bhikkhu. The buddha declared certain cosmological and metaphysical questions as whether the world is tetral to answer questions of this kind gave rise to the "silence of the Buddha" as a philosophical style in Buddhism. They included such questions as the Buddha" as a philosophical style in Buddhism. They included such questions as the Buddha, "as a philosophical style in Buddhism. They included such questions as the Buddha" as a philosophical style in Buddhism. They included such questions as the Buddha", so quest of the state question is a religion and philosophy exection.
